Wolfpack 'accepts follow on forces'

By Capt. Kristin Haley
8th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

Kunsan Air Base recently received and successfully bedded down a squadron of F-117s and more than 400 personnel.

"Accepting follow-on forces is a part of our mission and this deployment has given us an opportunity to practice that," said Maj. Alex Gaines, 8th Services Squadron commander. "This is the first reception we have had in over a year and it's been good practice for us," he added.

The 8th Civil Engineer Squadron has also been heavily involved in the reception of the forces from Holloman Air Force Base, N.M. The squadron established a tent area behind Gun Smoke Hill, which currently consists of more than 40 tents.

"We are treating the tents as another dormitory area and using our own forces to maintain support for them," said Lt. Col. Gregory Cummings, 8th Civil Engineer Squadron commander.

The support involved large numbers of people to help set up tents, environmental control units and a number of generators. The squadron is also heavily involved in the day-to-day maintenance of tent city.

It was a squadron effort according to Col. Cummings. Almost all of the CE tasks are performed in-house.

"We are using some contractor support, although CE does have the ability to operate without them," he said. This has been additional duty for everyone from electricians, to pavement and construction, heating/ventilating and A/C, power production and utilities — they all put in long hours said Lt. Col. Cummings. "The CE folks wouldn't say it's extraordinary but all in a day's work."

The services squadron received additional forces that act as the liaisons between the tent city and the mission support group. They run the morale, welfare and recreation tent where the deployed members can buy a soda, check out movies and bikes, or use the game systems said Maj. Gaines. There is also a phone and computer tent and an AAFES trailer, which provides uniform cleaning.

According to Tech. Sgt. Stephen Zopp, 49th AMXS deployed here from Holloman, "Services has really gone out of their way to accommodate us."

A1C Eric Christensen, 9th EFS intelligence also from Holloman, has already used the tents to call home and watch movies, but he appreciates the air conditioning in the tents more than anything else.

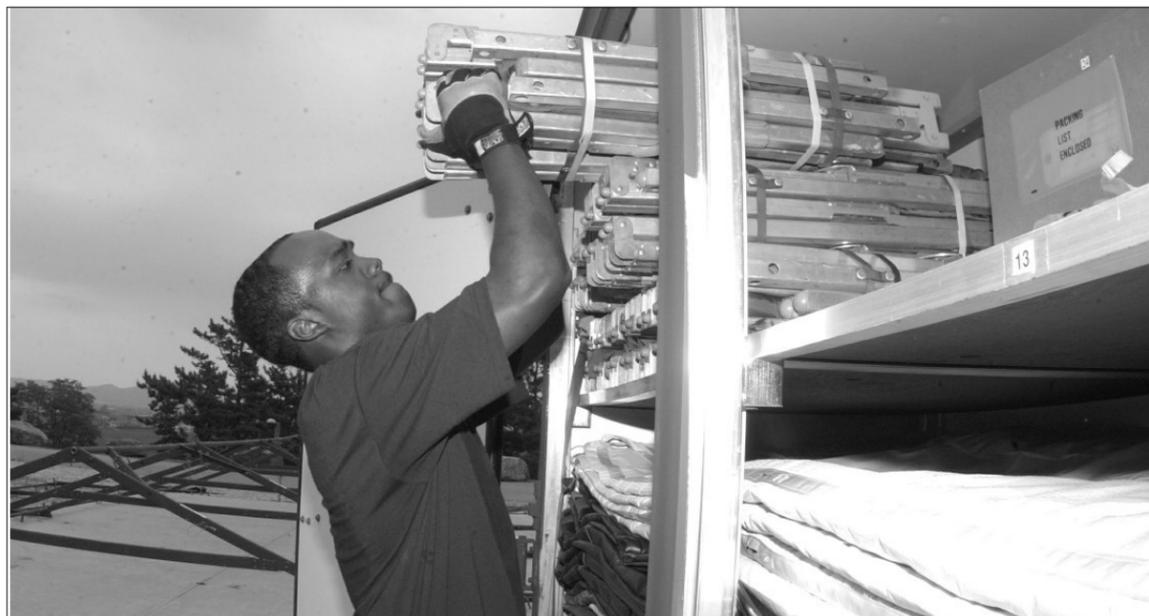

"It's great to have the opportunity to practice our wartime mission and everyone has done a great job," said Maj. Gaines.

According to Col. Cummings, Kunsan is ready at any time to accept additional forces.

"With little or no advance warning we can provide all the basic needs for additional troops," said Col. Cummings. "Although luxuries may take some time, we will get them what they need."

TOP: An 8th Civil Engineer Squadron member tears apart a bundle to prepare a tent for incoming troops at the area behind Gun Smoke Hill. Part of Kunsan's mission statement is accepting follow-on forces and the Wolfpack is poised and ready to feed, house and care for hundreds of forces with little or no advanced notice. With civil engineers including electricians, pavement and construction troops, HVAC technicians, power production and utilities putting in long hours to get the tent city up and running, it may have seemed extraordinary. But to most CE folks, it's all in a day's work according to Lt. Col. Cummings.

LEFT: Trucks packed with materials used to build up tent city are unloaded in preparation for incoming personnel from Holloman Air Force Base, N.M. More than 400 Holloman members are living and dining in more than 40 tents here. In addition to the living quarters and dining tent, the 8th Services Squadron — with the help of liaisons between tent city and the mission support group — runs a morale, welfare and recreation tent where the deployed members can purchase sodas and snacks, check out movies and bikes, or use game systems. In addition, an AAFES trailer has been set up for uniform cleaning as well as a phone and computer tent to help Holloman members keep in touch with their loved ones back home.

DoD expands anthrax, smallpox vaccinations

By Gerry J. Gilmore
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — More U.S. servicemembers, including those serving in South Korea, will be vaccinated against smallpox and anthrax, the Defense Department's senior medical adviser said June 30.

The availability of additional smallpox and anthrax vaccine will allow for vaccinating all servicemembers assigned to U.S. Central Command, and many serving in U.S. Pacific Command, said Dr. William Winkenwerder, assistant secretary of defense for health affairs. This includes troops assigned in South Korea. Winkenwerder said he could not provide the numbers of troops affected by the policy change, other than saying "tens of thousands" would be vaccinated. The policy change, he said, was not precipitated by a definite threat increase.

"There is no substantial change to the threat situation," Dr. Winkenwerder said, explaining the increased availability of both vaccines "will provide an additional layer of protection" for servicemembers.

Central Command troops deployed to the Afghanistan and Iraq theaters of operation had been vaccinated against smallpox and anthrax, Dr. Winkenwerder said, but now "all personnel in Central Command" will receive both vaccinations.

Servicemembers serving in selected areas of PACOM, including South Korea, also will receive the anthrax and smallpox vaccines, Dr. Winkenwerder said.

The cost of administering more smallpox and anthrax shots will run into "the tens of millions of dollars," Dr. Winkenwerder said, but the program would not strain his $30 billion overall budget.

Medical studies, Dr. Winkenwerder said, have shown that administration of the vaccines poses little threat to servicemembers' health. Since June 2002, the Defense Department has vaccinated more than 750,000 troops against anthrax. That number, he said, increases to an aggregate of more than 1 million if vaccinations administered since 1998 are factored in. Since December 2002, he said, more than 625,000 troops received smallpox vaccinations.

Col. William Uhle, 8th Fighter Wing commander, said he was aware of the decision to vaccinate all Kunsan members for anthrax and smallpox and is awaiting USFK and 7th Air Force implementation instructions.

Uniform board releases results

By Staff Sgt. Melanie Streeter
Air Force Print News

WASHINGTON — Air Force officials recently released the results of the 96th Air Force Uniform Board held June 18 and 19. The chief of staff approved a number of changes, affecting everything from cell phones to scarves. Among the changes are:

- Establish a standardized Air Force physical training uniform.
- Redesign the maternity jumper and bring back the maternity smock/tunic with added expansion tabs.
- Authorize the lightweight blue jacket to be worn indoors.
- Authorize, as an option, to have the Air Force symbol embroidered on the lightweight blue jacket.
- Offer the A-line skirt as an optional item.
- Redesign and revise maternity uniforms.
- Authorize the black scarf only with all Air Force uniforms, eliminating white, gray and olive drab options.

- Authorize conservative ornamentation on nonprescription sunglasses and eyeglasses. Frames may be black or brown material or gold/silver wire; brand name glasses may be worn with small logo on frames or lens; logo must be same color as frames or lens.
- Authorize wear of conservative wrap around sunglasses; frames may be black or brown material. Brand name glasses may be worn with small logo on frames or lens; logo must be same color as frames or lens.
- Authorize one small, black, nondescript personal digital assistant, pager or cellular phone at a time to be worn on the uniform belt.
- Allow black web belts or black riggers belts with nondescript buckles as an optional item with the battle dress uniform.
- Remove requirement to wear a tie or tab with short-sleeved shirt or blouse while traveling on a commercial airline.
- Authorize wear of a backpack over both shoulders.

— Authorize only a solid-color black backpack with blue uniform combinations and solid black, olive drab or woodland camouflage backpack with battle dress uniforms.

- Redesign the security forces beret.
- Create a metal or plastic security forces flash for beret.
- Standardize enlisted gore-tex jacket rank insignia.
- Allow the wear of plain black conservative hairpins, combs, headbands, elastic bands and barrettes with all female hair colors.
- Allow males to cleanly shave their heads or have military high-and-tight haircuts; females are not authorized to shave their heads or wear high-and-tight haircuts.

Changes will be included in the next update of Air Force Instruction 36-2903, being released this summer. For more information about these and other uniform board decisions, contact the military personnel flight customer service section at 782-7306.

Though the final decision on the new utility uniform hasn't been made, the security forces beret will be redesigned.

Wolf Pack Crime Watch

July 3:

Assault at Osan — A patrolman radioed SFCC to report an assault at the Challenger Club at Osan. Upon arrival of patrolmen, the Kunsan staff sergeant resisted and refused to follow instructions. The patrolmen released a military working dog to gain control of him. The staff sergeant was taken into custody. He refused to give a statement and received medical treatment for a dog bite. He was later released.

Failure to Obey Lawful Order (Curfew Violation/Failure to Identify) at Osan — A town patrol officer called the SFCC to report he had taken a senior airman and a staff sergeant into custody for curfew violation. They were read their rights, declined legal counsel and gave a written statement admitting to the violation. They were later released to the 51st AMXS first sergeant.

Failure to Obey Lawful Order/Underage Drinking at Osan — A town patrol officer called the SFCC to report he had taken an airman and an airman 1st class into custody for underage drinking. They were advised of their rights, declined legal counsel and gave a written statement admitting to the violation. They were later released to the 51st AMXS first sergeant.

July 4:

Article 128 — Assault; Article 117 — Provoking Speeches and Gestures; Article 134 — Disorderly Conduct, Drunkenness; Article 92 — Failure to Obey Order or Regulation; Article 95 — Resistance, Flight, Breach of Arrest and Escape — A staff sergeant called the security forces control center and said an individual was running down the second floor of building 1418 knocking on everyone's door and yelling. When the patrolman arrived, he saw two individuals in a physical altercation in the courtyard behind building 1418. As the patrolman attempted to separate the two, one pushed him away and refused to follow his commands. While attempting to apprehend the individual, the second individual struck the patrolman in the head. After continued verbal abuse and physical resistance by both individuals, the patrolman and his back-up forcibly apprehended both suspects.

Informational — A senior airman walked into the law enforcement desk and said he suspected his roommate of illegally using over-the-counter inhalants. Patrolmen arrived at the room and were given verbal permission to search the room by the roommate. After the search, the roommate was taken into custody and later released to his first sergeant.

July 5:

911 Call — An unidentified caller telephoned the SFCC and related that someone left a suicide note addressed to the police on the stairwell leading up to the roof in building 1511. Patrolmen arrived at the building and made contact with the individual believed to have written the note. He was asked if he was alright and if he knew anything about the note. He denied knowledge of the note and was questioned further about the note's contents. At that time he did admit to writing the note, was taken into custody and later released to his first sergeant.

You Must Always Be Ready

By Lt. Col. Kevin Schneider
80th Fighter Squadron commander

One of the unique aspects of Kunsan is the mission focus. We heard it from the very first day here in the Wolf Pack and we are reminded of it on a daily basis. Every one of us can recite the mission statement without fail. But even though we can recite it, we need to keep focused on being ready to carry out that mission when we are called. I have been in the Air Force for 16 years and have been witness to some unique events in our history – some good, some not so good. I wanted to relate three of these events to you. I chose these three to highlight this one truism – we don't always have the luxury of time to prepare ourselves to focus on the mission. It needs to be at the forefront of what we do on a daily basis – whatever we do in the Air Force.

In August of 1990, I was getting ready to graduate from F-16 RTU (sorry I'm old – it is now called FTU) at MacDill AFB, Fla. (yes, MacDill used to be a fighter base). One of the instructors raced in and told us that we need to go watch the news as Iraq had just invaded the country of Kuwait. I remember our group of new F-16 pilots all of camped around the TV glued to CNN trying to figure out what this all meant. Iraq? Kuwait? The Air Force, and the nation for that matter, had been so focused on the Soviet Union and the possibility of a major ground war in Europe that combat in the desert wasn't really on our scopes. Our training and our mindset weren't fully prepared for this development. Within hours, the United States started deploying air, ground and naval forces into the region. Within a few weeks, my classmates and I all graduated from F-16 training and went off to our units. Five of my classmates quickly found themselves deployed to Operation Desert Shield and eventually fought in Desert Storm. If anyone had told the group of us glued to the TV in the lounge at MacDill that five of us would be dropping bombs in Iraq in five months I doubt that any would have believed it.

In September of 2001, I was serving on the Air Staff in the Pentagon. It was my first non-flying assignment and I will admit that I felt "out of the mix." After 11 years of flying, my biggest threat appeared to be the DC traffic. The attack on the Khobar Towers in 1996 and the attack on the USS Cole in 2000 had definitely raised everyone's awareness of the growing threat of terrorism. But for the most part, we were focused on that threat manifesting itself in Southwest Asia. A terrorist attack on American soil was probably the furthest thing from my mind the morning of September 11, 2001. If someone had told me that morning the Pentagon was going to be attacked, I would not have believed it. If you had been told that September morning that we would be in Afghanistan by early October fighting the Al-Quaida, I doubt that many would have thought it possible either.

In January of 2003, I was back flying F-16s at Spangdahlem Air Base, Germany. The wing had just received a deployment order and we rapidly 'genned-up' aircraft, support equipment and personnel to get to the area of responsibility. There was a bit of uncertainty when we arrived and some felt that the situation was going to settle out and that we were going to revert to "normal" Southern Watch operations. This obviously was not the case and we kicked off Operation Iraqi Freedom in March. I had a unique view of the start of the major campaign operations as I was airborne over Kuwait when the first volley of Scuds was launched into Kuwait and I was still airborne nine hours later when elements of the US Army and Marine Corps began the ground offensive. If someone had told me two months prior that I'd be in the middle of the invasion of Iraq, I wouldn't have thought it was possible.

My point is this – we need to be ready to fight when we are called. Sometimes we have the luxury of time (as we did during Desert Shield) – time to prepare, time to modify equipment, tactics and even doctrine. And sometimes there is no warning – the attacks on 9/11 were obviously different. We had no prep time, no spin up and we learned painful lessons as a nation. Even in Iraqi Freedom, two months did not afford much time to spin up but we had the benefit of Operations Southern Watch and Northern Watch to prepare us as an Air Force. If we could accurately predict future events, this would be simple, we could focus our energy into maximizing our training and equipment to face whatever threat was on the horizon. But we can't always see the future clearly and we don't always have the time to figure it out as we transition from peacetime ops into combat.

Past events have taught us that we cannot always dictate the time and place of the fight. We need to continuously hone our skills so that when we are called to use them we needed.

Whether its here or anywhere else in the world – tomorrow, next week, next year – we need to be focused on the mission and be ready when called.

PACAF CC 'Proud to be "HOME"'

By Lt. Gen. Paul V. Hester
Pacific Air Forces commander

"WELCOME BACK TO PACAF!" Lynda and I were blessed to hear this often at the Change of Command ... and quite honestly, it put a HUGE smile on our faces.

We have immensely enjoyed our previous tours in the Pacific both at the personal and professional level. The cultural richness of the region has deepened our personal lives and the ability to serve professionally throughout the area with Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen, Marines and Coast Guardsmen has made it feel like "home."

"Home" is half of the earth ... 16 time zones ... over 105 million square miles ... 45 countries ... 30 territories ... 3.5 billion people ... 30 percent of American trade or $500 Billion – yes, the "B" word.

Thus, a stable and secure "home" is important to the prosperity of our great Nation AND to the rest of the world.

History has proven that militaries can be an effective tool for keeping peace – as well as making war. The current threat to our region's security puts a premium on your work with the militaries of Asia. Forging these close relationships – family and military – sends a powerful message ... America's commitment in the Pacific is real ... strong ... and lasting.

Lynda and I are fortunate to inherit the commitment of our previous commanders to improving readiness, preparing the command for the future and enhancing your quality of life. We will continue that work.

We are proud to be "Home." May God bless you and the Nation we serve.

Target Heart Rate

When exercising for cardiovascular benefits, make sure your heart is beating in the 'THR' zone. To calculate THR, subtract your age from 220. Stay between 60 and 90 percent of that number for the best benefits from your workout. For more information on THR training and other health related topics, call the health and wellness center at 782-4305.

Come hell or high water

Despite near constant rain and flooding fields, Fourth of July sports went off like a firecracker

By Master Sgt. Randy Phelps
8th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

The weather was less than ideal for a Fourth of July weekend crammed full of sports activities, but Kunsan's combat-ready troops braved the elements and completed a softball tournament, 4-mile run and other events in complete defiance of the elements.

Case in point was the softball tournament, which was scheduled to begin July 2. With Typhoon Mindulle causing havoc throughout Asia during the weekend, the storm's effects were felt here too.

The softball diamond was converted into a bowl of mud, which forced a postponement of the games until Saturday in hopes of playing on a dry field.

That plan didn't work so well. The rains continued and the 8th Services Squadron commander and fitness center staff made a decision to go ahead and play the games, but with a single elimination format instead of the double elimination schedule previously planned.

"Whatever the troops want, that's it," said Maj. Alex Gaines, 8th SVS commander. "We grabbed dirt and rakes and kept it going. The troops were happy and nobody got hurt. They had a ball."

At times during Saturday's games, players were standing at home plate with water covering their ankles. There were rivers of water and mud streaming across the diamond, and being able to see the bases and home plate was reduced to guesswork.

When the teams assembled for the games Sunday, they were met by not only more rain, but also 40 mph winds blowing in from right and center fields. Barry Bonds would have had a tough time knocking a ball out of the park Sunday morning.

And still the teams played on, with the 8th Civil Engineer Squadron and 8th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron — a landing in the championship game.

At last, a break in the weather allowed the fitness center staff to get the field in decent shape for the three games held Monday.

In the first game, the "Diamonds" didn't fare so well on the diamond. The commander's beat them like the proverbial redheaded stepchild while running away with an 18-0 win.

The second game was a contest between the "Chiefs" and "Eagles." Once again the enlisted corps was being spanked. But, at the last minute, the "Chiefs" staged a late rally and toppled the "Eagles" 23-22.

Then, came the championship game of the softball tournament between CES and AMXS-A. With the weather cooperating and the field in decent shape, AMXS-

A brought out the whooping stick and began piling up the runs on CES. When the dust had settled, AMXS-A had left no doubt about who was the champ, winning by the score of 28-11.

OTHER SPORTS RESULTS

FIRECRACKER RUN

The 4-mile Firecracker Run was also held Sunday morning with 29 contestants braving the high winds and rain.

Winner of the men's category was Sam Volkman, 8th CES in a time of 22:13. The top women's runner was Sasha Lewis, 8th Maintenance Squadron. She crossed the finish line in a time of 29:15.

BENCH PRESS

A bench press competition was held at the fitness center Saturday with Nolan Daniel flexing out 385 pounds to take the title. The competition was based on the person who could lift the most above their body weight. Daniel exceeded his by a 182 pounds.

DODGEBALL

8th CES did find other success in the sports competition this past weekend. They claimed victory over 8th Security Forces Squadron and 8th Medical Group teams in an old fashioned game of dodge ball played in the fitness center gym.

Fitness Fact

A recent published study showed that regular bouts of cardiovascular exercise not only improves health, but might help prevent the deterioration of brain cells that can lead to Alzheimer's disease. With Alzheimer's disease affecting more than four million Americans, this is just one more reason for the Wolf Pack to stay 'Fit to Fight.'

For more information on cardiovascular exercise, disease prevention, and other topics, call the Health and Wellness Center at 782-4305.
